Ceausescu, Italian Defy Soviet Uniformity Line

By Bernard Gwertzman

MOSCOW, April I (NYT).-President Nicolan Ceaucescu of Romanu teday told told the 24th Soviet Communist party congress that his country would continue to follow its own independent course, even if this brought it into conflict with Soviet policies.

In a late afternoon speech, heard by nearly 5,000 Soviet party delegates and more than 100 foreign delegations, he criticized efforts to impose a unity on the Communist movement and lectured Soviet leaders against taking wrong measures to patch up present difficulties and misunderstandings" in the movement. Earlier today. Enrido Berlinguer, the deputy general secretary of the Italian Communist party, the largest in Western Europe, also affirmed his party's on such issues as the Czechoslovak invasion. Their speeches were the sharpest divergences so far in the carefully-fostered atmosphere of unity created at the congress. which ended its third day of discussion. It is expected to continue for another week.

In contrast to Mr. Ceausescu's reiteration of Romania's friendship for, but independence from, the Soviet Union, every other East European leader who has spoken has pleaged his country's all-out unity with Moscow.

In addition to Romania only East Germany's Walter Ulbricht refrained from direct attacks on Communist China, which is the Soviet Union's main Communist internal affairs. "This is, in our view, the safe way to overcome the present difficulties and misunderstandings, to rebuild and strengthen the cooperation and unity of the Socialist countries," he said. The Romanian view ran directly counter to the Soviet ideological position, outlined both by Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet party leader, in his main report on Tuesday and by Pyotr M. Masherov, the Byelorussian lead-er, in his Kremlin-approved speech yesterday.

Without mentioning Romania by name, Mr. Brezhnev said: "It is precisely the nationalistic tendencies, especially those that assume the form of anti-Sovietism, that bourgeois ideologists and bourgeois propaganda have most (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

LONDON, April 1 (Reuters).— Union shop stewards at Ford of Britain's giant Dagenham plant today rejected a new pay offer which the company had hoped would end a nationwide strike by 50,000 workers.

Athens Is Said To Try Police for Deputy's Arrest

ATHENS, April 1 (UPI).—The speaker of the last Greek par-liament said today criminal proceedings have been ordered against police and military offi-cials responsible for the arrest of a former parliament deputy.

Mr. Kefallinos was one of more than 100 persons arrested late last year following a series of explosions in the Athens area. A misdemeanor court had rejected Mr. Papaspyrou's claims that police violated Mr. Kefallinos's rights in arresting him without a warrant, before daybreak, and holding him more than 24 hours without charging or arraigning him.

The proposed peace terms, as outlined by the U.S. agent, were threefold, according to Father Graham: military occupation of Japan, retention . the emperor, no territorial ambitions.

Personal Capacity

Father Graham quoted Cardinal Vagnozzi as having said that he acted in the 1945 episode only in a personal and private capacity without informing his superiors of what he was doing. Besides Cardinal Vagnozzi, Father Graham said, the only other Vatican officials who knew of the true mission of the U.S. agent were an American priest who has since died and Count Enrico Galeazzi, a layman who was close to Pope Plus XII and was then holding a high post in the Vati-can City administration.

A Japanese Roman Catholic priest who served unofficially as ecclesiastical counselor to Am-bassador Harada also was said to have known of the U.S. approach and was instrumental in conveying it to Mr. Harada, Father Graham identified him as the Most Rev. Father Graham suggested that the Japanese government had failed to respond to the American overture because "Japanese leaders were already embarked on a tragically mistaken attempt to sue for peace through Moscow. Stalin had then already decided to declare war on Japan.

As for the U.S. attitude toward Japan at that time, Father Graham wrote: "Was Washington equally at fault by not pushmore aggressively for peace the Vatican front? # GOP Senators Blast Critics

WASHINGTON, April 1 (WP). Republicans lashed back on the Senate floor today at Democratic critics of the President's Vietnam policy, saying they would have senators "on the firing line" regularly from now on to hit back at the "neo-isolationists who reject the facts and vacillate."

They were led by minority leader Hugh Scott, of Pennsylvania, who received a telephone call of thanks from President Nixon Tuesday night after Sen. Scott's response to Sen. Edmund S Muskie, D., Maine, on using the war to play politics.

The GOP senators defended the Laotian operation, referred scornfully to a House Democratic resolution calling for withdrawal of U.S. troops by the end of 1972, and insisted that President Nixon is going in one direction only in

Sen. Scott told the Senate he wouldn't tolerate without responding to any further challenges on the President's intentions about the war from Democratic political hopefuls. He said: Followed Party Line

"Many of these same people instead were talking about es-calating the war. They were following the party line a few years ago when President Johnson was practicing a hawkish policy in A bloc of Republican senators including J. Glen Beall, Md., Lowell Weicker jr., Conn., Robert Taft, Ohio, William Brock, Tenn., and Clifford Hansen, Wyo., took the floor to criticize the Democrats for questioning the Presi dent's policies and the success of the recent U.S.-backed South Vietnomese incursion into Laos. We are on the way out, and it is somewhat disappointing and if it wasn't so political, almost humorous to listen to the harping of some of my Democratic colleagues," said Sen. Taft.

"I am sick and tired of the war in Vietnam and for more than two years I have been a persistent critic of our involvement in Indochina," said Sen. William B. Saxbe, R., Ohio. "One thing that distresses me even more, however, is those who continually play politics with this unfortunate war. I am also sick and tired of them."

Nizen 'Has Plan'

Sen. Beall told the Senate that when he first came to Congress the Johnson administration had no plan to get this nation out of Vietnam, now under the Nixon administration, "we have a plan." Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew developed the same theme in a speech to a Veterans Administration volunteer service meeting.

He said critics of the war were making returning veterans feel "they are fighting in a worthless' and 'immoral' cause and that we ought to abandon the South Vietnamese to their enemy." This encouragement

New, Theory-Shaking Pulsar Discovered by U.S. Satellite

Cygnus, was discovered by America's Explorer-42 satellite. It is spinning on its own axis three times every second, "pulsing" huge quantities of X-rays into space each time it turns. huge The Cygnus pulsar is only the second X-ray pulsar to be found so far, but its pulse rate is only one-tenth that of the other Xray pulsar. Which-lies at the cenof the Crab Nebula. What makes the Cygnus pulsar so different is that it is not surrounded by the remnants of an exploded star, which encircle ray pulsar in the Crab Nebula. The prevailing theory behind pulsars is that they are neutron stars, nuclear leftovers of exploding stars (supernovae) that have collapsed into bodies so dense that a sugar-cube-size particle of the same matter would other pulsars including the X-weigh a billion tons. The Cygnus pulsar does not conform to this theory, primarily because there are no stellar fragments around it or near it that would have been left there by an exploding star. Its estimated age of 10,000 years is also too short a time for a supernova remnant to have disappeared. While the Cygnus discovery

By Thomas O'Toole does not destroy the neutron star theory, it does suggest that pulsars can be formed by more than one kind of celestial event. One theory now proposed is that the Cygnus pulsar couli be one of the theoretical "black holes" in the sky that have never been seen by optical or radio telescopes on earth. The fact that the Cygnus pulsar is only radiating X-ray energy, said Riccardo Giaconni, of the American Science and Engineering Co., suggests that it might be one of the black holes, which are objects so dense that they allow no light to escape them. Black holes are stars that have collapsed. Unlike neutron stars, however, the nuclear forces gencerated by the collapse are so great that the stars go on collapsing without limit and without end. If this happens, the theory holds, the gravitational forces inside the star become so strong that light waves leaving the surface are bent back into the surface. Hence the name "black holes.

At leastone eminent astronomer disagreed with the idea that the Cygnus pulsar might be a black hole, however.

"This discovery is certainly a mystery," said Cornell University's Frank Drake, "but there's nothing about black holes that suggests they produce X-rays. The explanation for this pulsar could be that it had a higher magnetic field when it collapsed. This would be enough to gene-

Unit in Senate Delays on Gas War Treaty WASHINGTON, April 1 (WP).

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will delay action on the 1925 Geneva protocol against poison gas until the Nixon ad-ministration restudies its contention that the treaty doesn't forbid use of tear gas and herbicides in warfare, it was learned yester-The administration has asked for Senate approval of the treaty, but insists that the document wasn't intended to har the use of riot-control agents and herbicides such as are used in Victnam. Many members of the committee, including Chairman J. William Fulbright, D., Ark., believe the United States gains only marginal benefits from using these substances in the Southeast Asia war and ought to renounce them and approve the treaty without any reservations.

Without taking any record vote, Capitol Hill sources said, the committee agreed Tuesday that it would take no immediate action on the treaty, Instead, it will simply hold it and write to Secretary of State William P. Rogers, and possibly President Nixon himself, asking the administration to take another look at its position on riot-control agents and herbicides.

There is a Widespread belief in the Senate that if the committee sends the treaty to the Senate floor with endorsement of the administration position, critics of herbicide and tear-gas use will wage a major fight that could embarrass the U.S. and possibly block the treaty. A two-thirds vote is needed for ratification.

On the other hand, if the committee sends it to the floor with language overriding the administration position, defenders of the use of tear-gas and herbicides might also be able to block it. If the administration were, however, to withdraw its position that tear-gas and herbicides are allowed by the treaty, a fight might be avoided and Senate approval

The Battle of Bengal

Whether or not there has been a "massacre" in East Pakistan, whether, indeed, the conflict there can be termed a civil war. or has been largely suppressed, is still unknown. The best guess would seem to be that West Pakistani soldiers control the chief cities, but are hard-pressed in some of the rural areas. What is clear, however, is that relations between India and Pakistan are again under severe strain, both because of the stern tone of Indian parliamentary statements on the case, and the possibility that India's Bengal is becoming a base for Pakistani rebels.

A thousand miles of Indian territory separates the two portions of Pakistan. A thousand years of history unites Hindu and Moslem Bengal—which was once India's largest and most vital province. The division of the sub-continent separated Pakistani Bengal from its natural ports and many of its supportive industries, but evidently has not bridged the cultural, economic and geographical gulf that looms between East and West Pakistan. It could be argued, therefore, that the two Bengals logically should be united. But in what context?

The Indian Bengali has his own grievances. He was one of the prime sources of revolt against the British Raj—it was the Bengal Army that mutinied in 1857—although his metropolis, Calcutta, was long the capital of British India. He has little more in common with the Indian Punjabis and Sikhs of the north than his Moslem neighbor has with the Moslem Punjabis of West Pakistan. Political consciousness has been stimulated in Bengal for more than a century, and it is now a disturbing element among the welter of races and tongues that makes up modern India

Assuming that the Bengalis of East Pakistan were to achieve some kind of independent status, and forge closer links with the Indian Bengalis, Pakistan would be weakened. But it does not follow that India would be strengthened thereby. Rather, it might be assumed that Bengal would be strengthened, at the expense of the fragile Indian sense of nationality.

Meanwhile, however, the most urgent danger is of a clash between India and Pakistan over the issue. Pakistan and India are already exchanging charges-India asserting that Pakistan is engaging in genocide: Pakistan that India is interfering in the domestic concerns of a neighboring sovereignty. If Pakistani charges were to be backed by actual Indian intervention, whether by official act of the Indian government or by a spillover of Indian Bengali turbulence across the border, a real war could ensue.

The world outside has very little solid information to sustain or refute the charges of either side. It can, however, recognize that both the Pakistani use of force and the Indian choice of words entail grave risks for the sub-continent. And it can urge moderation, in deed and word, upon both nations

Trouble for the Dollar

Another crisis for the dollar may be in the making. Last year the United States ran a $10-billion balance-of-payments deficit in its settlements with foreign governments-the biggest such deficit in American history. This year another big deficit is likely, though probably not as large. These deficits have meant a transfer of far more dollars abroad than foreigners want to hold, but they have not been able to do much about it, because the dollar is an official reserve currency used by this country to settle its foreign accounts.

Despite the huge deficit last year, the international monetary scene was relatively quiet because foreign dollar-holders were able to earn a high return on their dollars by lending them to U.S. borrowers. At the height of the liquidity crisis here, interest rates on Eurodollars soared to more than 12 percent. Lately Eurodollar rates have fallen to just above 5 percent, but with American banks "awash with liquidity," in the phrase of Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur F. Burns, the demand for Eurodollars in this country has evaporated. In fact, Eurodollars are since European interest rates are above those Pressures on European governments to do something about excessive dollar flows are increasing from protectionist business interests abroad-interests that would just as soon exclude American competition from their markets in any case. Concerns about a European recession are intensifying these pressures.

Under these circumstances, it would be Toolish for the United States to adopt-or seem to adopt—a policy of "benign neglect" of its balance of payments. It is doubtless true, as the Joint Economic Committee said this week, that the United States must give priority to concerns about the domestic economy to achieve high employment and price stability. But the crisis necessitates practical steps to reduce the payments deficit and make clear this country's determination to solve the problems it creates for

The first necessity is to get United States inflation under better control-for both domestic and international reasons. This means not only avoiding excessive monetary stimulation but adopting a broad-based and effective incomes policy.

If further stimulus proves needed, it would be better to emphasize fiscal measuresexpenditure increases or tax reductionthan still looser money, which could further depress interest rates and accelerate capital flows abroad.

The United States should also soak up some of the surplus dollars overseas. It has already been doing a moderate amount of that through Export-Import Bank borrowings of dollars in Europe. Washington can use some of its gold special drawing rights to this end. However, a better mechanism is needed to re-circulate short-term capital flowing to and from nations. Crises are bred by hot-money movements.

Clearly, the adjustment problem should not rest solely on the American side. Govavy and continuous nav ments surpluses should upvalue their currencies. Perhaps the most conspicuously undervalued currency today is the Japanese

Greater exchange-rate flexibility could make a major contribution to balance; widening the bands within which national currencies may fluctuate relative to each other would do much to prevent American economic fluctuations from whipsawing other economies.

Although the balance of payments cannot dominate either domestic economic policy or foreign policy, there is one great step this country could take that would serve all three purposes: reduce its enormous outflow of expenditures for the war in Indochina. Cutting unneeded military outlays in other areas would serve the same purposes. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

International Opinion

A Cog in the Machine?

Because the idea of war crimes has long been associated with Hitlerite satanism, all nations believed themselves secure from such charges. Nazis were monsters and elected to be monsters. The French elected to be civilizers in Indochina and Algeria. The Americans still elect to be the protectors of the "free world" in Vietnam.

Yet, little by little. America is beginning to wonder. Could there not be "ordinary" war crimes, committed on behalf of the best intentions? The "radical" left has for a long time answered this question affirma-

A much less political-minded part of public opinion is beginning to wonder in its own way; it has rather a tendency to pity William Calley than to accuse him. "Why should a small man be sentenced when the great risk nothing?" As a matter of fact daily infringements of the war rules have taken place and continue to take place with the approval, at least tacit, of the highest civilian and military authorities of the country. It is quite true that Lt. Calley has been, in every respect, only a tiny cog in the American war machine in Vietnam.

The Soviet Party Congress

Mr. Brezhnev's opening speech on Tuesday lasted more than four hours. At this juncture in international relations, the rest of the world could reasonably expect him to have had something to say which would have had at least a moderately intelligible bearing on how Russia sees possible future developments. Nothing of the kind was forthcoming from Mr. Brezhnev. He trotted out grandiose "peace" and "disarmament" proposals which bore no relationship to actuality. As the proceedings were being televised for the first time, it was a tempting forum for propaganda.

SANTIAGO, Chile.—In formulating foreign policy Washington must always separate two considerations: what is good for the inhabitants of the country in question and what is good for the United States. This quality lies at the heart of the approach to Chile's new Marxist government. It is not our business to over-stress what we imagine is good for the Chileans. The period of Manichaen moralizing that affected U.S. cold-war actions has passed. We have learned to accept with equanimity a variety of nations whose ideology differs widely from our own.

Moreover, outright intervention in Latin-American affairs—the Caribbean being a notable exception—has fairly well disappeared. Chile is nowhere near any vital U.S. interest, such as the Panama Canal or the soft underbelly of Nevertheless, as Talleyrand used to say: "Non-intervention is a political and metaphysical term and means about the same as intervention." It is possible for both Washington and Moscow to exert considerable influence here by indirect means.

Not Unlikely

There is a likelihood, indeed, that both capitals will be inspired by coming events to apply such nositive non-intervention: Washington because it wishes to protect regional interests and Moscow because Chile has been drawn willy-nilly into the Sino-Soviet ideological fight. The Soviet Union doesn't want to see its adherents here outflanked on the left.

Today there is no political mob assembled behind President Allende, only a flock, But extreme-left elements are forming activist local mobs and trying to push him faster than he wants to go. For this reason Moscow sending a new ambassado: with much experience in heretical Romania and Cubs, hoping to discourage the go-go boys of Man Tse-tung.

WASHINGTON-The confident, For the President has been tied almost Khrushchev-sounding disarmament proposals aired by Leonid Brezhnev at the 24th party congress find their true significance against the background of a proposal put forward by the Russians in the secret arms-control talks now going on in Vienna. The central fact is that the Russians have put the United States on the defensive Moscow will be picking up propaganda points galore until the Nixon administration gets untangled shough from its own fancy footwork to respond to the serious offer the Russians have advanced in the Vienna talks The serious Soviet offer, as distinct from the rhetoric of the party congress, involves the anti-ballistic missile, or ABM. The Russians have put forward a draft treaty, whereby the two countries agree to limit ABM development to a single system—the so-called National Command Authority. Under that proposal, the Russians would stop ABM development at the level of the present system they have built around. Moscow. The United States would build an equivalent system. After that there would be a freeze on both sides.

Vague Definition

The Soviet proposal has two undoubted difficulties. It has no provision for limiting offensive weapons. It is vague in the def-inition of National Command Authority, and therefore the rings built around Washington and Moscow might be improved through technological break-throughs to the point of becoming full national systems.

Even so, the offer is attractive. Each side would have immediate assurance that the other was developing only a limited defense capability against nuclear weapons. Existing stocks of such weapons would be more than enough to do devastating damage to the other side. There would thus be little incentive to go on building new offensive weapons.

Several leading Democrats, including Sens. Hubert Humphrey and Stuart Symington, have seen these possibilities and responded in a positive way. They have called on the United States to accept the Russian proposal of an ABM freeze as a first step for a temporary period. During this period ABMs would be frozen, and negotiations would continue for a larger agreement limiting the number of offensive weapons and defining more exactly the meaning of a National Command Authority. But the administration has heen much more inhibited in dealing with the Soviet gambit.

above, is what will then happen in all the rather numerous states where levels of welfare payments are now well above $2,400 for a family of four. The first thing to note is that no state will fail to gain some financial relief from the Mills program. In New York, one of the highest welfare states, the current benefit level is $4,032 for a family of four. The federal gov-ernment now pays 50 percent, or $2,016. Thus New York will gain $384 per case under the new system, for each of its approximately 250,000 cases in the APDC category. It is erroneous, too, that Southern states will gain more than Northern states. The states getting the largest share of relief for their own budgetary burdens will be those states with the largest welfare caseload, in the main. It can even be argued that Southern states with low benefit levels will have their financial problems substantially but indirectly complicated by the new federal system. Total N.Y. Cost Soars

This is because there has been an enormous outflow of people to high welfare states, like Illinois and New York. With federal payments at $2,400, such states may stop contributing directly to the welfare system. But they must expect a substantial shift of population: and this will add to school costs, health costs and the like, without any proportional increase in the tax base. Yet the fact must also be faced that if Rep. Mills passes his bill, the high-welfare states will inevitably tend to lower their benefit levels towards the federal maximum. In New York, for instance, simply during Gov. Rockefeller's term in Albany, the total welfare cost has risen from $600 million to $4 billion

Ulster PM Wins Vote of Confidence

BELFAST, April I (Reuters),-Northern Ireland's new prime minister, Brian Faulkner, won a convincing vote of confidence in the provincial House of Commons early today after two days of heated debate.

Later, Mr. Faulkner went to London for talks on security matters with Prime Minister Edward Heath and key British ministers. It was Mr. Faulkner's first contact with British leaders since taking over as prime minister nine days ago after the resignation of Maj. James Chichester-Clark.

Mr. Faulkner ruled out general rearming of the police-a move advocated by many Protestant hard-liners as the only effective way of dealing with Northern Ireland's series of violent acts blamed on the IRA.

To suppose that a general rearming of the police would lead to the defeat of the IRA was simply not practical, he said. The German-born leftist, known as the woman who slapped former Chancellor Kurt Georg Klesinger in the face in 1968, was arrested after she and former French Resistance fighter Ralph Feigelson visited the Cologne Prosecutor's Office shortly before noon. They had gone there to present evidence against former Nazis.

Prosecutor Josef Bellinghausen, who spoke to the two in private for more than half an hour, said Mrs. Klarsfeld, 32, has been taken to jail. She was charged with aggravated attempted abduction, attempted constraint, and criminal association. West German law provides a maximum total of 23 years jail for the crimes.

"I was expecting something like this," Mrs. Klarsfeld told newsmen waiting in the court building after her arrest.

EEC to Adopt Left-Hand Driving! French Radio Announces in April Fool Hoax

PARIS, April 1 (AP) .- France-Inter, the often humorless radio voice of the French government, reported to million of bewildered listeners this morning that the Common Market, in a gesture to Britain, had decided to institute left-hand driving in its six member countries. The report was a "Poisson d'Avril"-French for an April

Fool's joke-but it apparently took in thousands of listeners. The 7 a.m. news bulletin said that the decision was made by Common Market transport ministers after an all-night session in Brussels. In later news reports, France-Inter reported satisfaction in England, where it was considered an even trade for British acceptance of the metric system. A historian then explained that for the French it was the return to old Gallic tradition which had made it easier for horsemen to have their sword arms The report was never denied by the government. A France-Inter spokesman said it received hundreds of telephone calls and 30 felegrams, many of them angry. In the town of Bourgoin, a radio spokesman said, the police had even set up a left-hand driving practice course. "This kind of thing is an old tradition with us," he said. "But today's was the biggest success we've had in a long time. Even some of our own executives were taken in by it."

Ivry Gitlis and His 1713 Stradivarius

By David Stevens

DARIS. April 1.—In five straight days last week, Ivry Gitlis managed to play a lot of violin music, to pull down several barriers between performer and audience, to shake up some petrifying notions of what concerts should be like, and to work himself to a frazzle.

It all took place in the small Salle Gemier of the Theatre Natiqua. Populaire, which every season devotes a series of concerts to one composer or theme. Last year it was Stockhausen, next year Boulez. This year it was an instrument — specifically Gitlis and his 1713 Stradivarius.

The range was from Bach to Berie, by way of Beethoven, Brahms, Bartok and Berg: from standard repertory to avant-

"Staatstheater" (State The-ater), described as a "scenic composition" by Mauricio Kagel, will have its first performances April 25 and 28 at the Hamburg State Opera. which commissioned it. Kagel will conduct and stage the work and collaborate with Ursula Burghardt on the decor. The singers include Luisa Bosa-balian, Gladys Kuchta, Elisabeth Steiner, Richard Cassilly, Kurt Moll and William Workman, aided and abetted by a group of actors, "60 women and men of the State Opera chorus with solo duties, a percussion ensemble, members of the Philharmonic State Orchestra, and non-danin the printed program, Gitlis figured in all but two, plus some added starters.

Let of Work

"I showed the program to Leonard Bernstein when he was in town a little while ago, and he told me I should rest for six months before starting it," the violinist recalled. "I'm not doing this as if it were some kind of contest or endurance feat, but it's a lot of work. The programs aren't any longer than usual, but short things like Schoenberg's 'Fantasie' or Webern's Opus 7 pieces take as much work to prepare as one of the repertory warhouses.

Why then? "Well, there are really two reasons. First of all as a kind of en-couragement to violinists and composers," and his craggy, mobile face broke into a self-deprecating grimace. "That sounds pretentious-but no one seems to write for the violin any more. Boulez doesn't. Stockhausen doesn't. But aside from that, it's just that I like music, and I like music for the violin."

The week started almost conventionally-an evening of sonatas with a gifted young planist. Georges Pludermacher, whose regular duties keep him in the Opera's pit. Yet it was already a program that tested the Israeli viclinist's range. Brahms's No. 3 had strength and warmth, and Bartok's No. 2 the full tonal palette it demands. Hindemith, Stravinsky and Debussy all benefited

The second program was for solo violin, and at a break in rehearsal the day after that, Gitlis talked about it. Besides the Bartok solo sonata and the Bach Chaconne, it included Bruno Macerna's brand new "Piece pour Ivry" and the first French performance of Roman Haubenstock-Ramati's "Multiple I," both of which leave much to the performer, This suits Gitlis, who likes improvisation, just fine. He did a "second version" of Maderna's piece (which only arrived in the mail the previous week) at a later concert.

Haubenstock-Ramati's work is really for two violins for, it seems, two of anythings, so Gitlis taped one part at home, then accompanied himself at the concert. When he was doing the tape at his Paris home, the dog started to howl. "But I liked the way it came out so I left him on the

"It's too bad you weren't there." he told a visitor with a mis-chievous smile. "I also played a new piece by a young New Zea-land composer named—ah, what's his name?" he asked, turning to clarinetist Michel Portal on hand to rehearse Bartok's "Contrasts" with Gitlis and Pludermacher. Between them they came up with something that sounded like James Collins Terrill. "You've never heard of him, have you," Gitlis asked, and, on being assured of that, added: "No, and you never will again either."

"Actually, Michel and I tried to make a name out of 'choles-terol,' but we decided that was from his stylistic sensitivity and too obvious," he went on. He recounted how, at a recent concert, he played one of these short. pieces by "a new, young com-poser," and afterward a woman came up and asked him to repeat it.

"Of course, I had just improvised it, so I couldn't play it again, so I said instead of repeating it I will play something else by the same composer."

The joke is semi-serious-and Fritz Kreisler probably would have approved.

Between rehearsal and performance, Gitlis rushed over to Europe-1 to record an interview with Michel Lancelot. After a few jokes and some bantering repartee, Lancelot coaxed him into

"Music isn't my whole life, but it's at the center of my life. I express myself through my violin -everything passes through it like light through a prism. I play as I am."

Early Saturday afternoon, Gitlis arrived at the Salle Gemier not quite sure if his playmates of the evening would show. Pludermacher was there, and so was Kenny Clarke, sitting near his drums, smiling and dapper. Then Bibi Rovère slipped in as unobtrusively as anyone could lugging a bass fiddle, as the violinist set the scene for Clarke and others in earshot.

"Music is music—jazz, pop. rock. classical, commercial, whatever you like. What the hell, I'm not a jazz musician in a professional sense, but I love jazz and I love to improvise. Michel Legrand writes light music, commercial if

Finally Legrand came in, wearing sneakers, red slacks and sweater and an open-necked shirt, munching a sandwich, and was pleased to learn his uniform would do for the concert. All week, Gitlis had been wearing dark blue slacks, turtleneck sweater and a kind of sleeveless smoking jacket that gives his stevedore's build energetic style plenty of and

NEW YORK.—Here is how The New York Times critics rated recent screen arrivals:

"Mad Dogs and Englishmen." directed by Pierre Adidge, the filmed record of British blues singer Joe Cocker's American tour last year, "is exactly what a cinéma vérité concert film should be music as recorded during lively performances." Vincent Canby reported. "Mad Dogs and Englishmen' patronizes neither its audience nor its stars. Occasionally it lets peripheral characters make rather sober fools of themselves. The film, however, is too good-natured, and too involved with the actual performance of a single star, to waste much time with this sort of thing, which is why it is so satisfactory, so pleasing. It is unclutter-

"Taking Off," the first American film by Milos Forman ("The Firemen's Ball" and "Loves of a Blond"), elicited from Vincent Canby: "Not a major movie experience, but—a good deal of the time—a charming one." Forman's speciality, in the critic's opinion, is "tender farce played out in what are, essentially, very bleak circumstances." Here the "circumstances are bleak but the movie, about Jeannie Tyne (Linnea Heacock), who leaves her parents behind in Forest Hills when she takes off for the East Village) is not."

"Brother John," directed by James Goldstone, starring Sidney Poitier, is "a stern, finger-pointing fantasy that has the apoca-lyptic aspirations of Samson and Delliah' and the vision of 'Search for Tomorrow.' At last Mr. Poitier has taken on a fictional role that matches his lofty public image ... If 'Brother John' is a disasterand it is-the responsibility is Mr. Poitier's whose company produced the movie and hired every-one connected with it. Time has run out. "anishing Point," directed by Richard C. Sarafian, "must have seemed a sure-fire idea," Roger Greenspun reported. "So many dumb movies have been saved by an exciting automobile chase in the last few minutes why not make a dumb movie that is nothing but an automobile chase? And perhaps it is a sure-fire idea. At least that is a way of explaining my pleasure in a movie about which I can think of almost nothing good to say." Greenspun continued: "I suspect that Berry Newman really can act, though in 'Vanishing Foint' all he needs is a driver's license." "Transient Life," a story of

The background of a savage, primitive world against which the youthful love story unfolds is effectively realized. The performances of Anjelica Huston the director's daughter) as the pure maiden, child of a mighty lord, and of Assaf Dayan the son of the Israeli general) as the questing scholar benefit from the seasoned directorial guidance and have a direct and winning simplicity. The film itself, however. lacks a commanding unity and strong dramatic drive.

Dustin Hoffman lured Cusic into his fatal Last Stand to punish the vainglorious general for his previous massacres of indians. Such is the news that "Little Big Man," tongue in check. belatedly brings us. It is at the Mercury in English. The tone of the film, directed by Arthur Penn, is one of broad burlesque. It begins with the lest survivor of the last atti-Indian campaign revealing all in a hospital ward at the age of 120 to an inquiring reporter. The ancient veterari relates how his family, save for his little sister. were tomahawked by the Pawnees on a covered wagon journey West Hoffman then was brought up by a more friendly Cheyenor tribe and became a brave himself before he was recaptured in a raid by white men and fell into the hands of a pompous Baptist missionary and his wayward wife. Penn has sought to lend this comic fable an air of the picaresque novel with the hero's servitude to a quack medicine man-his return to the Indians, his marriage to four squares and his etuning betrayals of Custer as its casionally takes wins.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Soviets Seek Japanese Loan

The Japanese Federation of Economic Organizations says Y.A. Ivanov, president of the Soviet Bank for Foreign Trade, and V.S. Alkhimov, Soviet Deputy Minister of Foreign Trade, are in Tokyo for talks with Japanese government and business leaders on the possibility of a Japanese losn for the Soviet Union. Japanese financial sources said the Soviet Union is seeking a private loan from Japanese commercial banks for use in the development of natural gas deposits in northern Sakhalin and coking coal mines in south Kaynisk, Western Siberia.

Boeing Moon Contract Raised

Boeing Co.'s contract for development of hunar roving vehicles was increased by $17.5 million to $37.8 million, the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration reports. The agency said the increased outlays were needed to solve en-gineering problems in development of the vehicle, which will transport two astronauts across the moon's surface. The first vehicle will be sent to the moon on the Apollo-15 mission scheduled for launching July 26. Other vehicles will be used on Apollos 16 and 17, scheduled next year.

Ekofisk Gets Eurodollar Credit

The Ekofisk petroleum consortium has signed seven-year credit will have a floating interest rate tied to the interbank Eurodollar rate. Phillips Petroleum Co. is the Ekofisk operator. Other consortium members include subsidiaries of Petrofina of Belgium, AGIP of Italy, and cf a group of French oil companies Venezuela Eurodollar Loan Bank and N.M. Rothschild and Sons.

Venezuela has negotiated a $70 million Euro-

dollar loan to boost its petro-chemical industry, according to Finance Minister Pedro Tinoco. The seven-year agreement, to be signed April 9, will be made by a group of banks led by Manufacturers Hanover, N.M. Rothschild, Bankers Trust, White Weld, First Boston, Kuhn, Loeb and Loeb

U.S. Merger Activity Declines

Merger activity in the United States continued a downward trend in the first quarter of 1971. Total merger announcements dropped 18 percent to 1,150 from 1,405 in the first 1970 quarter, according to W.T. Grimm and Co., a Chicago-based financial consulting firm, Merger announcements were off 25 percent in the fourth 1970 quarter and 15 percent for all of 1970.

refiners followed the rise, which in turn reflects higher London and U.S. quotations. Nippon is expected to adjust the price again on April 15.

Nippon Raises Copper Price Nippon Mining Co. raised its price for electrolytic copper 11.5 percent to 435,000 yen ($1,208.30) a metric ton. Other Japanese copper agreements for a $75 million multi-currency credit to help finance development and production of the oil field on the Norwegian continental shelf. The funds are being provided by a consortium of 18 banks led by First National City

If you make better ones, they say, the world will beat a path to your door, You can pave that path with good advertising.
And for all of Europe, there's no better medium than the Herald Tribune, the newspaper the significant Europeans read.

BLONDIE

BRIDGE.

By Alan Truscott

The unusual North-South bid-ing followed the "Simplified Club" system, in which an open-ing one-heart bid is limited and guarantees possession of a fivecard or longer suit elsewhere in the hand. One no-trump was positive and forcing, requiring the opener to show his second suit. On finding that the suit was diamonds, North put his partner into four hearts.

West led a heart to his partner's king and South won with the ace. The spade ten was led and when West and dummy played low East made the key play of ducking. With all four hands in view it is not difficult to see that if East had taken his see the declarer would have been ace the declarer would have been able to establish dummy's spades, making, eventually, three spade tricks, five trump tricks and two minor suit aces.

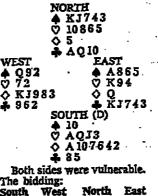

As it was, South struggled hard to no avail. He cashed the diamond ace and ruffed a diamond with a low trump. East was able to overruff with the nine and play his last trump to cut down the ruffing chances. South won in his hand and allowed West to win a diamond trick with the eight.

On a club return from West, South played dummy's queen and East won with the king, leaving

SOUTH ♦ 13 ♦ 1076 ♣ 8

Fully alive to the situation, East returned the spade six. This gave dummy a spade trick, but there was no way in which South could avoid the loss of one more trick to go down one. He would have been equally helpless if East had chosen to return a club, giving him an extra trick in that suit instead of in spades.

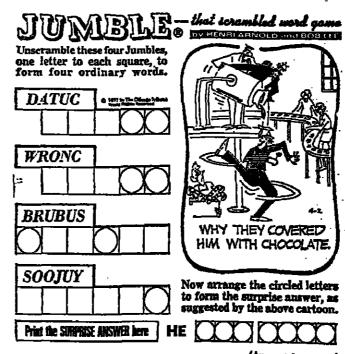

The bidding: 1 N.T. Pass 4 ♥ Pars Pass Pass Pass Pass Pass West led the heart two.

Richard J. Daley of Chicago By Mike Royko. Dutton. 215 pp. $5.95.

MIRE Royko is a witty and widely respected columnist for the Chicago Daily News, long an outspoken foe of Mayor Richard Daley. Now he has given us a book on His Honor—neatly written, energetically paced and full of marvelous stories sure to please lovers of urban politics. But ultimately it is a disappointment because it doesn't tell us what makes Daley tick.

If a writer is going to devote a book to one man, he should try at some point to look at the world through his protagonist's eyes. Royko, however, has only a thorough, steely contempt for his subject—he doesn't want to spend a moment in Daley's mind. As a result, his mayor is a twodimensional villain, a man of bad will, had manners, bad grammar, and—one feels certain by the end bad breath.

For instance, Royko devotes one sentence to the fascinating fact that Daley's first political memories are of attending women's suffrage marches with his mother, but two pages of arrant speculation to Daley's association with the 1919 race riots. Royko never probes things that might add another dimension, such as the mayor's insistent identification with the common man. "The party permits ordinary people to get ahead," Royko quotes Daley as saying.

"Without the party, I couldn't be mayor. The rich guys can get elected on their money, but somebody like me, an ordinary person, needs the party. Without the party only the rich would get elected to office."

Royko properly details Daley's centralizing of political and administrative power and his mon-signor-like dedication to bricks and mortar (though I would like to have seen more about how wields power through his staff of "whiz kids"). But Royko doesn't pull the elements together into a coherent theory of the

The identification with the underdog, the view of ethnic blocs as the key to political power, the centralization, the emphasis on building things, the stress on administrative action—doesn't it all fall into a pattern? Isn't it rem-iniscent of the set of ideals surging in the heads of those young men who flocked to Washington in the 30s to shape the New Deal? Daley may have been sit-ting in the Illinois legislature in the late 30s, but his political mind was being formed by what was happening in the nation's capital. Today, he seems the quintessence of the New Deal politician-administrator. Which is also the source of his troubles. Civil rights, for instance, was never the strong suit of the New Deal. The theory was then, and seems to be Daley's now, that induced prosperity is the best road to helping the underdox and assuring equality. But civil rights dissenters - not to mention ecology groups—often think that the goal of prosperity clouds more important issues. As for politics,

Meet Promoters Start Chase To Stage Ryun-Liquori Race

NEW YORK, April 1 (NYT). underrated. I think he's capable -An article in a British sports weekly earlier this year suggestof doing anything he sets his mind to. He has all the confidence ed that Marty Liquori, the Vilin the world." lanova distance runner, was A 21-year-old senior, Liquori swept the mile and two-mile titles at the NCAA indoor meet

"I don't think he'll realize his potential," Dick Bank, a prominent American in track and field. concluded in a long analysis on the ailing state of the sport in the United States. "Liquori is obviously overrated in the United States (some actually believe he is in Ryun's class) ...."

Marty Liquori and Jim Ryun have become track and field's conversation piece this spring. et promoters are panting in attempts to put the two runners on the same track in the same race, the mile.

One denial of a reported race in El Paso, Tex., on May 22 already has gone out. Officials of the Dr. Martin Luther King jr. international Freedom Games, scheduled for national television May 16 in Philadelphia, are dreaming of "the great race" between Ryun, Liquori and Kipchoge Keino of Kenya, the Olympic 1,500-meter champion. But only Liquori is confirmed.

Liquori and Ryun have not met on a track since June, 1969, when Liquori beat his Kansas rival in successive weeks at the National Collegiate and Amateur Athletic Union outdoor championships. The second defeat sent Ryun into semi-retirement.

Different Men

In many respects, the two Americans have come to symbolize sectional ideologies as much as separate personalities. They are as different as Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier, Joe Namath and Fran Tarkenton, and discussions among aficionados produce the same diverse intensity.

"People seem to take sides because we're so different," Liquori said the other day, after a long workout along the Philadelphia main line near the Villanova campus "Jim's got the vision of being a nice boy, sort of the All-American boy, and I'm pictured as the kid on the block who's al-ways getting in trouble."

Ryun was born in middle America, now resides in Oregon and is the sport's most glamorous name, the world recordholder in the mile, 1,500 and half-mile. He is a shy sensitive athlete who prefers privacy to public displays and follows the philosophy of most Western runners who believe that the real season in the sport does not begin until the sun shines in the spring. Liquori, from Cedar Grove,

N.J. is the most prominent subfour-minute miler produced in the East. He is candid, colorful and combative, on and off the track, and relishes the intimacy, atmosphere and tactics of the indoor scene, so integral in eastern track.

Both athletes were members of the 1968 United States Olympic team, but mentioning Liquori in the same sentence with Ryun two years ago would have been treason to track followers. "Is Marty in Ryun's class?" Jumbo Jim Elliott, Liquori's coach, said recently. "I think he

Swoboda Is Traded To Expos Mets Receive Outfielder Hahn

By Joseph Durso ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., April (NYT).-Ron Swoboda, the eading home-run hitter and leading rebel in New York Met history, was traded to the Montreal Expos last night for Don Hahn, a 22-vegr-old utility outfielder who has never hit a major league

The trade ended a winter of campaigning by Swoboda to get manager Gil Hodges to play him or trade him. Hodges obliged, sending Swoboda not only to an other team but also to another country.

The outfielder, 26, received his walking papers just before the Mets played their 24th and final exhibition game in Florida. They left in full retreat, too, committing six errors and losing to the St. Louis Cardinals, 12-2. The Mets also gave up Richie Hacker, a minor league shortstop.

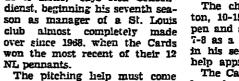

Swoboda was signed by the Mets in 1964, when Casey Stengel was in full voice as manager, and he became a varsity rightfielder the following season. During the next half-dezen seasons, he hit 69 home runs, batted in 304 runs and averaged .242.

Rhodesia's Status For Olympics Still in Doubt

BONN, April 1 (Reuters) .--The Bonn government is not yet sure if it will admit Rhodesian athletes to West Germany to take part in the 1972 Olympics in Munich, a government spokesman said today. Conrad Ahlers told a press conference that West Germany, in adherence to a 1968 United Nations resolution, has pledged itself to maintain no official ties with Rhodesia.

Therefore the government would have to undertake an investigation to determine if the admission of Rhodesia to the Games would be in conflict with the resolution.

Ahlers emphasized that the West German government..was not consulted when the Olympic organizing committee invited Rhodesia to participate

Brain Teasers

WASHINGTON. — Everybody loves a puzzle, or should. To brighten the day, therefore, we offer the following brain twisters. For quitters, the solutions appear at the bottom of this space.

1. The Mysterious Saloon. This is an old Orien-tal puzzle illustrating the East's

Jascination with the inscrutable Occident.— There is a mysterious saloon on the corner which attracts unsavory characters into the neighborhood. Baker A strong man arrives one day and announces that he intends to clean it out. The neighbors gather as he prepares to storm through the swinging doors, but he orders them to stand outside until he has finished. He enters. The racket of a fierce brawl is heard within. After a long noisy interval, the swinging doors burst open and the strong man is thrust outward in the bum's-rush posture and kicked into the street. Who threw him out and what benefits will accrue to the neighborhood as a result?

2. Imagery—Carlyle has begun to feel like one of life's losers. His taxes have risen and his income bas shrunk. Auto repairmen repair his car wrong. His children tell him he is dreary. he has dandruff and his wife has been urging him to increase his life insurance. Carlyle's admirers tell him that his problem results from an unsatisfactory image. He decides to do something about his image and consults every one of the 50 leading image designers in the District of Columbia. What do they tell him?

3. The Revolutionary's Plot-Jimmy, who has dropped out of college and gone to Greenwich Village to make the revolution. becomes fatigued and decides to go to Florida for an Easter vacation. He cannot call home and ask his parents for the however, because his parents are capitalists and stand for everything he is pledged to

By Russell Baker destroy after the Easter vacation. He places a collect telephone call to his equally destitute friend Pete and obtains the money to go to Florida. How does Jimmy obtain the money from the penniless Pete?

4. Spiroling Costs—College tui-tion has just increased by 3,000 times the amount of the last increase in the price of beef. which has risen by twice the amount of the increase in the cost of the Sunday paper when purchased at a newsstand. En route to the drugstore in a hurry, because you have heard numors that the price of aspirin may he doubled momentarily, you encounter Vice-President Agnew. In a hurry, but not wanting to appear rude, you ask him the one question which, you suddenly realize, he can answer to his complete satisfaction by using only three letters of the alphabet, thereby freeing you quickly to hurry on to the drugstore. "What is responsible for this awful inflation, Mr. Vice-President?" His answer, of course,

Solutions:

1. The Mysterious Saloon-Logic demonstrates that the strong man's failure to clean out the saloon can only have resultfrom the attitude of the American press, which wanted to see unsavory characters pollute the neighborhood. The press plot has failed, however, for by keeping the saloon's denizens absorbed at fisticuffs, the strong man has prevented these rogues from setting up another saloon on another neighborhood corner.

2. Imagery-All 50 image designers tell Carlyle that they are too busy working on the President's new image to take on a new job. 3. The Revolutionary's Plot-Jimmy knows that Pete is not a revolutionary, but a hedonist, and will therefore have no scrupules against telephoning his to demand varation money for two and threatening to be unhappy if they demonstrate a lack of love for him by refusing to come across.

4. Spiroling Costs-"Who made this inflation, Mr. Agnew?" Who

The Oddest Inhabitant Of the Olympic Grounds

By Dee Pattee

MUNICH.—Spring has come to Munich's Oberwiesenfied site of the 1972 Olympics, in a rush of tree planting and landscaping. designed to soften the stark Olympic outlines with a fringe of green. Spring has come, too, to the oddest inhabitant of these grounds: 89-year-old Father Timofei Prokorov, self-styled Russian priest, whose tiny onion-domed East-West Church and rude out-buildings squat in the middle of the Olympic goings-on like a Model-T on a high-

"Squat" is the right word, too, for Father Timofet laid claim to his few thousand square yards of land 18 years ago, and he has no intention of moving out. Unmindful of the bulldozers that roar around outside his homemade fence, and of the concrete and steel Olympic skyline that grows from week to week, Father Timofei and his companion, Sestra (Sister) Natasha live the life of a simple Russian farm couple. The illusion is heightened, by Sestra's garb voluminous skirts and aprons, topped by a babushka. In winter thermelt the snow on the roof for water, for the Hermitage has no water. electricity or plumbing, and in spring they work the rich soil before planting begins.

Father Timofei and Sestra wandered down from Rusia in 1953. choosing the then lonely spot on the outskirts of the city "because God directed me here to build a church for all mankind to worship in." His church, says Timofel, is "nix Catholic, nix Protestant, nix Orthodox." but for everyone. Apart from this never-varying spiel. Väter-chen, or Little Father, as the Germans call him, is vague about himself, his past, and his church. Some versions say Sestra is a nun from the Caucasus, others describe her as Vaterchen's sister or his common-law wife. No matter. She is Timofei's right hand and the only member of his congregation.

It was Sestra who helped Timolei fashion old bits and pieces of lumber, fence posts and oil drums into their first achievement: A ting, closet-sized chapel which sits on a small rise of ground, Over the years the two of them hammered, sawed, painted, plastered, planted, and eventually created not only the chapel, two or three small huts that serve as house and sheds, but finally the East-West Church itself, a 12-by-15-foot building in the shape of a cross, topped by somewhat irregular-shaped enion domes.

The first eviction notice came in 1962. Timofei, who reads no German and speaks it haltingly, had a friend translate the document for him. He then framed it and hung it in his church. The next serious eviction attempt came in 1968, when plans for the Olympics were well under way and Timofei's land was being eyed for the equestrian events. The old couple might have been forced to move, had not the press and public come to their defense. Meanwhile, the Olympic Committee discovered they didn't need his ground for equestrian events after all.

So the old couple stays on—eccentric, loveable but to the Germans distressingly schiampig (grubby). The whole thing has the savor of a bit of Alice in Wonderland, and to visit the Hermitage only deepens the feeling. Visitors are freely welcomed when the gate isn't locked, and Timofei is usually happy to show one around. First stop is course the church, of which one hears many comments, "Timofei's church is ridiculous," someone told me. "It's all lined in tinfoil with paper flowers and Christmas tree balls." True, it is, and there's more. Silken banners, tattered and fading, from a Bavarian religious procession, bad religious art "discount house kitsch" notes a German newspaper) from Madonnas through a magazine reproduction of "The Last Supper." Blue Christmas tree balls suspended from three makeshift chandeliers, large sheets of clear plastic on the floor, covering bright squares of crocheted wool which serve as rugs. The rugs, which make a stab at the geometric designs of Turkoman or Caucasus rugs, are the handiwork of both Timofei and Sestra. White crepe paper flowers outline each picture, climbing in trellis fashion alongside pictures and around the several altars. And, above it all, a tinfoil ceiling shimmering like the inside of a jewelbox.

As another bulldozer whines past outside Timofel's property, ploughing and churning up the soil, Timofei smiles, a strong smile in a suntanned face. An annoyance, this Olympic business, he seems to feel but then for a holy man who is waiting for a day when all mankind will worship together—this is just a blink in the long passage of time. And what if one day he did have to move? "God would find me something better," he grins. A rather shrewd grin.

PEOPLE:

The State Department spokes-man had no clear explanation of the latest incarnation of the bombing halt understanding be-tween the United States and North Vietnam but—try as he did at first to obfuscate—he was uncharacteristically unequivocal in his response to the next question. "What (is) the attitude of the State Department... toward the wearing of hot pants by em-ployees of the State Department in the State Department?" a reporter inquired. "I think a judicious response to that question would suggest that while I wouldn't want to en-dorse it in a blanket fashion," spokesman Charles Bray warily started out in what looked like a typical attempt at a nonanswer, "It is clear there are those," and he paused—"I'm going to be in deep trouble"—he zigzagged on with a wan smile—and, finally, he took the plunge: "I personally think it's a nifty idea. prison are getting worried about their public image in the wake of a wave of stabbings there this year. A group of convicts wrote the news media this week complaining that only sensational and violent news is coming out of the prison. "Sensationalism to attract readers, viewers and listeners we don't need," the letter declared. The group asked why there was not more publicity about a foster daughter in Peru whom the convicts support or about graduation exercises where five men received associate of arts degrees and 34 got high school diplomas. "We do have our problems," the letter said, but "we do know that they must be solved if we are to continue to exist in a normal setting, or as near normal as possible for this environment."

The 40 bar owners in Tuam. Ireland, conscious of their public duty, have turned down the offer of a free air trip to Belfast and back. Tommy Joyce, secretary of the publicans' association, explained: "Can you imagine the disaster if the plane crashed? Every pub in the town would be closed." The air trip was offered by a Belfast brewery which wants the barkeeps to inspect its plant. public-minded publicans The opted instead to make the 300-

Chris Rothwell, 35, the crack international auto rally driver who has twice won the gruelling East African Safari classic has failed to pass his British driving test, "I am frankly amazed," said Rothwell after being rejected by the examiner. "The only consolation is that my wife failed too." The Rothwells lived in Tanzania for many years. They recently returned to Britain. Chris had io take the test in Britain even though he passed one in 1952.

In Tanzania he was in charge of an army driving school and for two years he ran the police driving school. "To tell a rally driver he can't drive is like telling a Kentucky Derby winner it can't run." commented a Royal Auto-mobile Club spokesman. Rothwell can continue to drive in Britain for a year on his Commonweath license but after that he will not be allowed on the road without an accompanying driver until he passes a British test.
